

Morocco and the United Nations

The Kingdom of Morocco's first sovereign decision, taken shortly after its independence, was to join the United Nations, on November 12, 1956. It has, ever since, maintained a firm and irreversible commitment toward contributing to the goals and principles of the organization, which converge with the fundamentals of its foreign policy and its international action.

Morocco has actively contributed to peace and security throughout the world, the development of international law and the promotion and respect of human rights. Morocco also participates with great dedication to the UN's efforts aimed at reinforcing international cooperation and South-South solidarity.

Stemming from its traditional commitment to the strengthening of multilateralism, Morocco supports the reform process of the UN as well as the enhancement of the organization's role and work, and the revitalization of its organs so that it can adapt to new geostrategic realities and global challenges of the 21st century.

Morocco's third mandate as a non-permanent member of the UN Security Council reflects its irreversible commitment to multilateralism as a fundamental framework to preserve international peace and security.
